“Qi” in Ancient Chinese

Qi

"Qi" is the essential energy of both our body and mind, requiring a harmonious balance for maintaining good health. To prevent imbalances and disharmony, it's crucial to maintain equilibrium among the various forms of Qi that constitute life. The human body contains four types of Qi:

- Yuan Qi (Parental Qi): Inherited from parents at conception and stored in the kidneys.
- Zong Qi (Pectoral Qi): Generated through breathing and stored in the chest.
- Ying Qi (Nutritional Qi): Obtained from food and responsible for distributing nutrition throughout the body.
- Wei Qi (Defensive Qi): Shields the body from illnesses.

At Qi Forest Spa & Wellness, our exclusive forest-scented essential oil blends will invigorate the body, guiding our guests into a deep state of relaxation by immersing them in the forest ambience.

Our personalized essential oils act as aromatic remedies for the soul, providing diverse approaches to unblock and restore Qi balance, ensuring complete harmony of the mind, body, and soul.
